HOW TO PLANT

When the seedlings are removed from the "healing-in" trench, they should be immediately placed in a pail or bucket, which should contain several inches of thin mud to keep the roots moist. If the roots become dry the trees may die.

Two men work to best advantage in planting small tracts. The first one makes the holes with a grubbing hoe or mattock or other similar planting tool. The second man follows with the seedlings and places one tree in each hole, slightly deeper in the ground than it stood in the nursery, and with trees in place with roots properly placed (not cramped), soil should be packed around roots and be firmly tamped with mallet or heel of shoe. All air spaces should be removed, otherwise tree will die.

Dear Sirs:

About 12 years ago I started planting evergreen trees that I bought from the state for sale as Christmas trees. Now I have 10,000 growing and have sold them for the last 4 years starting with sales of $38.50 and this year sold $307.00 worth.

However, there is one new development, people seeing the evergreens would like to buy them for Landscaping. Since I agreed not to sell them as rooted stock when I bought them from the state, I thought I would inquire if you could sell perhaps one thousand or more in variety which I could grow and sell as rooted stock.

Please quote prices if you have any such to offer.

Sincerely,
James A. Cullen
